Is it a 'flash mob' or simply just a mob?

Still trying to figure out a name for the unruly, even violent behavior of teens One witness says they give bad name to real flash mobs

Saturday night's Broad Street melee was the summer's first major incident in what has become an unwelcome Philadelphia tradition that has yet to receive a universal name.

The controversial term "flash mob" was originally used to refer to groups of people who used social media to organize benign public performances. Later extended to describe kids who used the same sites to meet up and cause mayhem, the term is now being used as a catch-all to describe large gatherings of rowdy youths, whether preplanned or not.

"We call them wolf pack attacks in Upper Darby when you get a group of six or seven or more that attack somebody, but you can define it as a mob," said Upper Darby Police Chief Michael Chitwood. "Whether you want to put the term 'flash mob' on it, that's up to the investigating agency."

Other cities use the word "wilding" to describe the type of spur-of-the-moment chaos that occurred Saturday night, when crowds of unruly teens attacked several passers-by.

"Flash mobs usually originate by some type of social networking, whether Facebook, Twitter or texting," said Chitwood, who is dealing with Upper Darby's first such incident. Fifteen arrests were made yesterday after more than 30 teens gathered through Facebook and text messages at 69th Street and stormed a Sears.

Upper Darby police has various social media accounts, but does not have the resources to dedicate an officer or unit solely to monitoring these outlets.

Not a 'flash mob'

A witness to Saturday night's chaos on North Broad Street, who also videotaped a short portion of the mayhem that included a young woman's leg being broken, said it shouldn't be called a flash mob.

"I think calling these kids a 'flash mob' is a disservice to flash mobs in general because flash mobs have been used very creatively by groups of people," said Aine Doley, 34.

"It was a cool performance art thing. But the kids, it's terrible. What they're doing with it and the fact that people have called them a 'flash mob' is bad for what flash mobs can be. I don't know what they are, but people need to start cracking down on them."

NEW JERSEY. Authorities recovered a body in Barnegat Bay yesterday near the site of where a Coast Guardsman fell off a speedboat Saturday night.

Lt. Tom Ryan of the Ocean County Sheriff's Department told the Asbury Park Press an autopsy will determine if the body is 25-year-old Petty Officer Nicholas Holmes.

Authorities had been searching by plane and boat for Holmes who was tossed from a 23-foot boat by a wave. METRO/ALP

NEW JERSEY. A camping trip turned fatal for a couple yesterday just north of Trenton when a tree fell on their tent, killing a man and critically wounding his wife.

State park officials say that a several-thousand-pound sycamore tree fell on the campers at Bulls Island Recreation Area in Delaware Township around 6 a.m. Tuesday. The 42 year-old woman was flown to a Trenton hospital and remains in critical condition. METRO/ALP

Bridge will be built

SRDC president and CEO Joseph Syrnick said "construction isn't stopping." As for Thursday's meeting, "We couldn't have closed the dog run until we built a new one. If we're able to say we saved one, two, six trees, and that's the best we can do [and that's not enough], it'll go to federal court."

Members of the neighborhood group have mentioned that volunteers may chain themselves to the old-growth trees.

▶ It's the dog days for the Schuylkill River Dog Dun.

- Neighbors and leaders behind new pedestrian bridge over RR tracks along Schuylkill will discuss solutions
- Sides meet tomorrow to hash out replacement park

The Schuylkill River Dog Run will remain open and 27 nearby trees are safe until at least Thursday when representatives of the city, Schuylkill River Development Corp. and dog park users will meet to discuss possible compromises during the construction of a court-mandated pedestrian bridge.

An emergency hearing was scheduled for yesterday after Citizens for Saving Schuylkill River Park filed for a temporary injunction. The city and SRDC moved the case to federal court, and the citizens group has 30 days to respond. Their attorney, Damon K. Roberts, hoped it won't come to that.

Discussions will center on finding space for a similarly sized dog run to the one being closed near 25th and Locust streets. About the temporary dog run being expanded from 12 to 40 percent of the current one's size, resident Max Zahniser said, "That's good progress. Keep going."

Neighbors think powerful people with a voice on the Friends of Schuylkill River Park governed location selection. Sarah Stuart Clark of the river's Park Alliance noted that information had been publicly shared often, and that it's unfortunate concerns weren't raised earlier in the process.

"There's been a lot of 'we'll listen to you' and then they just move ahead saying 'you'll live with it,'" Zahniser said. "I'm hoping there will be dialogue and not more of the same."

Overtime inspection pay spurs SEPTA drivers suit

Group argues in class action they don't get paid for required vehicle inspections SEPTA does not agree

Fifteen bus and trolley operators filed a class action civil lawsuit against SEPTA last week in federal District Court, claiming the agency violated the Fair Labor Standards Act by not paying workers for mandatory inspections.

SEPTA operators are required by state and federal law to inspect their vehicles before they go into service, including things like checking brakes, lights, doors, horns, etc. For the last three years, operators have been conducting the 15-minute checks "off the clock," the complaint alleges. The suit claims that in many cases the inspections would put operators at more than 40 hours per week and require overtime pay.

The suit seeks three years of compensation, interest and attorneys fees. A separate suit has been filed regarding second-half pre-trip inspections.

SEPTA claims there is no basis for the complaint. "The time required for the pre-trip inspection was negotiated in the contract and the operators are paid for that time," spokeswoman Jerri Williams said.

Bombers attack top hotel in Afghan capital

Suicide bombers attacked a major hotel frequented by Westerners in Afghanistan's capital late yesterday, with four blasts and bursts of gunfire heard after an attack claimed by the Taliban, police and Reuters witnesses said.

There was no immediate information about the casualties.

The attack at the Intercontinental Hotel, one of Kabul's two main hotels, came the night before a conference about the gradual transition of civil and military responsibility from foreign forces to Afghans was about to begin.

The hotel was not one of the venues to be used by the conference or its delegates, an Afghan government official said.

One blast was heard at the start of the attack — and then three more at least an hour later, one of the Reuters witnesses said. Bursts of gunfire were heard over the same period and flares lit up the sky over the hotel. REUTERS

Transition

The increase in violence comes as NATO-led forces prepare to hand security responsibility to Afghans in seven areas from next month, at the start of a gradual transition process that will end with all foreign troops leaving Afghanistan by the end of 2014.

NM races to protect nuke lab from fire

Los Alamos National Laboratory under threat from wildfires ◐ Blaze could double or triple in size ◐ Air quality being monitored for radiation

New Mexico officials raced yesterday to bring in more fire crews and equipment, including radiation monitors, as an out-of-control wildfire raged near the pre-eminent U.S. nuclear weapons laboratory.

Firefighters managed to keep flames off Los Alamos National Laboratory property throughout the night on Monday as the blaze continued to grow, reaching 60,741 acres, said Lawrence Lujan, a spokesman for the Santa Fe National Forest.

Importance

Los Alamos National Laboratory was established at the end of World War II to house the top-secret Manhattan Project to build the first atomic bomb. It still serves as home to the nation's largest nuclear weapons cache.

POST YOUR COMMENTS: WWW.METRO.US/NEWS

The laboratory will remain closed today due to fire danger, lab spokesman Kevin Roark told Reuters.

Fire officials said the so-called Las Conchas blaze had the potential to double or triple in size. Several towns are under mandatory evacuation, including the nearby city of Los Alamos, with a population of around 12,000.

Los Alamos lab officials called in teams late Monday to monitor its air quality, including a broad spectrum of radiation, and have high-volume air samplers ready to deploy.

Roark said that no lab facilities faced immediate threat and all radioactive and hazardous materials were accounted for and protected. The closest call was when Monday's spot fire burned an area called TA 49, which has been headquarters of the lab's bomb squad and training facilities for its hazardous materials response team. The fire was quickly put out. REUTERS

French Finance Minister Christine Lagarde yesterday clinched the top job at the IMF, keeping the international lender in the hands of a European at a time of growing concern over a possible Greek debt default.

Lagarde will become the first woman to head the International Monetary Fund when her five-year term as managing director begins on July 5. She will find herself immediately immersed in efforts by the IMF and European Union to head off a Greek default that could touch off an international crisis.

"The executive board, after considering all relevant information on the candidacies, proceeded to select Ms. Lagarde by consensus," the IMF said in a statement. REUTERS

Consumers still gloomy

NEW YORK. The plunge in U.S. home prices showed signs of leveling off in April, but worries about unemployment pushed consumer confidence to a seven-month low in June.

House prices were helped by the start of the spring selling season, data showed yesterday.

Nonetheless, economists warned prices will likely crawl along at low levels as a large number of homes, many of them at bargain prices, come up for sale.

"The degree of hemorrhaging seems to be slowing," said Anthony Chan, chief economist at JPMorgan Private Wealth Management in New York. REUTERS

Pawlenty criticizes Obama

Republican presidential candidate Tim Pawlenty accused President Barack Obama yesterday of a timid and incoherent response to the "Arab Spring" uprisings against autocratic rulers across the Middle East and North Africa.

"From Morocco to the Arabian Gulf, the escape from the dead hand of oppression is now a real possibility. Now is not the time to retreat from freedom's rise," Pawlenty said in what was billed as a major foreign policy address.

The former Minnesota governor, seeking to gain ground in the race for the 2012 GOP presidential nomination, said Obama had failed to carry out an "effective and coherent strategy" in response to the Arab Spring uprisings. REUTERS

Patients stand up for drug

SILVER SPRING. Breast cancer patients testified that Roche Holding's Avastin saved their lives as U.S. health officials consider whether the world's best-selling cancer drug should still be approved for that condition.

Patient testimony began the rare two-day meeting to hear Roche's appeal of the Food and Drug Administration's proposal in December to remove the breast cancer indication for Avastin.

"We cannot permit sponsors to evergreen approval of a drug that has not been shown to be safe and effective," said Dr. John Jenkins of the FDA. REUTERS

Search leader tries one more time to get into the social network biz

Google, frustrated by a string of failed attempts to crack social networking, is taking another stab at fending off Facebook and other hot social sites with a new service called Google Plus.

Google designed the service, unveiled yesterday, to tie together all of its online properties, laying the foundation for a full-fledged social network. It is the company's biggest foray into social networking since co-founder Larry Page took over as chief executive in April.

Page has made social networking a top priority at the world's No. 1 Internet search engine, whose position as the main gateway to online information could be at risk as people spend more time on sites like Facebook and Twitter.

To set its service apart from Facebook, which has more than 500 million users, Google is betting on what it says is a better approach to privacy, a hot-button issue that has burned Facebook, as well as Google, in the past.

Central to Google Plus are so-called "circles" of friends and acquaintances. Users can organize contacts into different customized circles — family members, co-workers, etc — and share photos, videos or other information only within those groups. REUTERS

Cook plans to tune in to 'The X Factor'

David Cook, winner of the seventh season of "American Idol," knows who buttered his bread back in 2008.

"I might tune in — [show] a little old-school support," he said when we asked him if he'll be supporting his past judges, Paula Abdul and Simon Cowell, in their new venture, "The X Factor." "I think Simon and Paula both were a huge part of the 'Idol' process for me; Paula was a big champion of mine, so I'm sure I will support."

But does Cook, who was celebrating the release of his second album, "This Loud Morning," at The Paramount Hotel yesterday in New York, think the popularity of "The Voice" might take away some of the audience for "The X Factor"? "I think it's great because I feel like those are just more avenues to find new talent," he told us, ever the diplomat. "I think it's a win-win for everybody."

However, he later admitted that although he owes his newfound fame and fortune to a televised singing competition, it doesn't necessarily mean they're always on his must-see list.

"The thing is, I actually haven't watched 'The Voice,' so I don't even know the format, I just know there's four left," he says. "I don't know how they got there."

— With additional reporting by Meredith Engel

A Cook-out for Fourth of July?

"You know, unless a show pops up, I'll probably just get lost in a bottle of beer and watch the fireworks. If I could sneak home, I might go catch up with family, but [since] I live in L.A., I'll probably just hang there with my pup and brother. I have a Scottish terrier."

Beyonce: Waiting on the babies

Beyonce admits that when it comes to starting a family, she may have to eat her own words. "I always said I would have a baby at 30," the singer, who turns 30 in September, tells Piers Morgan. "But," she added, "I also said I was going to retire at 30." Far from retiring, she has a new album out and she also says her marriage to Jay-Z is just fine. "Jay and I have made a decision that we want to be known for our music and not our relationships or scandals," she says. That's such a sane thing to say, I can't believe I'm devoting column space to it.

Aniston dishes out the advice

With so much attention on her love life, it's no surprise Jennifer Aniston also gets asked for relationship advice.

"You need to talk to each other and you have to say what you want. You don't confront your man about things which you're not happy about, you approach it in a much more constructive way," she tells OK! magazine. "You never want to be in an adversarial situation where it's you versus him."

Funny. You'd think her first piece of relationship advice would be to make sure your foxy husband doesn't decide to co-star next to Angelina Jolie.

Talking points

Shia LaBeouf understands

Shia LaBeouf admits he doesn't have the best public image in Hollywood, but he just can't help being himself, the "Transformers" star tells Details magazine. "I would like to be George Clooney — diplomatic. I just don't have the wherewithal yet or the inner serenity," he says. "My bulls— meter is tuned very sensitive. The minute it starts kicking up, I get back to truth, and sometimes that involves, you know, 'I don't want to take a picture.' And if that's the case, am I an a—hole for being honest? Or am I an a—hole for being dishonest, smiling in your picture and I f—ing hate being there? Which one is worse? These are the questions I ask myself that George Clooney doesn't ask."

Olivia and Jake?

Olivia Wilde has caught the eye of another of Hollywood's most eligible bachelors. The "House" star was reportedly acting very "touchy-feely" with Jake Gyllenhaal during a recent night out at the Chateau Marmont, sources tell People magazine. "At one point, he had his hand on hers," a source says. "Olivia was very cool and wasn't fawning over Jake but seemed to like the attention he was giving her." The two left separately.

▶ LaBeouf

▶ Wilde

Now just 'One and a Half Men'

It looks like Charlie Sheen and "Two and a Half Men" are done for good, as the show's writers are planning to kill Sheen's character off to prevent him from ever returning to the show, according to TMZ. While the script hasn't been finalized, sources say one option involves Sheen's character driving his car off of a cliff. Meanwhile, sources close to Sheen tell Radar Online that the actor has signed a deal with TBS, although TBS has denied any reports of a deal.

The natural wisdom of fairy tales

The Schuylkill Center's latest exhibit, 'Facts & Fables,' explores our relationships with nature, both in the real-world and in fiction

Grandma's big eyes and big teeth were early warning signs for one Little Red Riding Hood, but now they're being considered as forensic evidence. Jeanne Jaffe playfully reimagines the familiar fairy tale as a crime scene as part of the Schuylkill Center for Environmental Education's latest art exhibition, "Facts & Fables: Stories of the Natural World."

Quoted

"I was interested in re-examining Little Red Riding Hood from that point of view, a reversal of victim and victimizer. The threat is no longer nature but human culture — due to our excessive narcissistic greed with no concern for the consequences." JEANNE JAFFE

Her take on the story explores "innocence and naivete versus hunger, avarice, greed and consumption," Jaffe says. "I was interested in re-examining Little Red Riding Hood from that point of view, a reversal of victim and victimizer. The threat is no longer nature but human culture, due to our excessive narcissistic greed with no concern for the consequences."

Jaffe is one of seven artists invited by the Schuylkill Center to "reveal the ways in which we perceive, interpret and retell our experiences of nature — both fictional and factual." The works also include Brian Collier's evocation of extinct bird species, Susan Hagen's wood sculptures of animals killed by the Deepwater Horizon oil spill, Blane De St. Croix's miniature landscape, David Dempewolf's animated visions and Chad Curtis' sculptural microcosm (streamed online via solar-powered video camera).

Jaffe, whose "CSI: Grandma's House" occupies the Center's pine grove, doesn't promise to quite solve the case: "[Fairy tales] represent deceptively deep explorations of the construction of human conscience and consciousness," she says, "as well as deep insight into moral dilemmas."

Credit Card Debt?

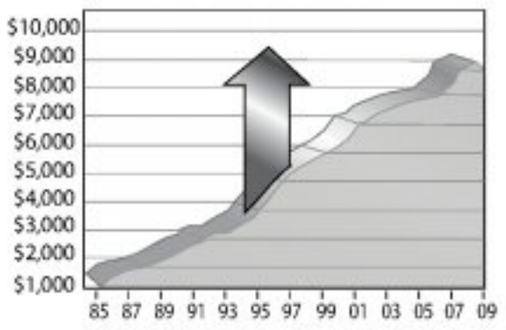
ADVERTORIAL

Solutions that can help you get out of debt.

Tom Hill
CGA STAFF WRITER

Every three minutes another person falls behind on credit card debt. It's no wonder, since every major credit card company has nearly doubled the minimum monthly payment on consumers' bills. Federal Regulators forced the change because of their concern about the growing mountain of consumer debt, which stands at $2.17 trillion. Many consumers can only pay the minimum payment, which can take up to 30 years to pay off. Now, relief is in sight for millions of Americans.

U.S. CREDIT CARD DEBT PER HOUSEHOLD ($)



(Data Source: U.S. Federal Reserve)

Over 200,000 families, located throughout the U.S. have regained financial independence with CreditGUARD's licensed, bonded and insured service. CreditGUARD of America has received high marks in consumer surveys showing high consumer satisfaction and confidence. Jason Segel: The everything man

The actor has a dozen projects in the works, but we talked about the coolest ones yet: 'Bad Teacher' and 'The Muppets'
How the 'HIMYM' star does it all

Jason Segel isn't one for summer vacation. While on break from "How I Met Your Mother," the actor, writer and musician is beyond busy promoting his latest film, "Bad Teacher," opposite Cameron Diaz and Justin Timberlake, and putting the finishing touches on his passion project, "The Muppets."

Quoted

"One of the things that makes the movie work is that Cameron is so intrinsically likable."
SEGEL, ON "BAD TEACHER" CO-STAR CAMERON DIAZ

"Bad Teacher" is a great example of raunchy comedy done well. What do you think makes it work?
I think one of the things that makes the movie work is that Cameron is so intrinsically likable and is known for having such a bright personality that there's a lot of fun to be had in seeing her kind of off the rails with that character, so I think that's part of what makes that work. At no point do you actually think she's a bad person.

Was there any improvisation for your scenes with her?
There was quite a bit of ad-libbing. I think part of our process in general is that a lot of the hard work is done in casting, and once you've hired people that you're confident know their parts even better than you do as the writer or director, and so you trust in

Q&A: Getting it done

Between TV, film and promotional duties, how hectic is your schedule these days?

I was in Michigan a couple of hours ago filming and then flew into New York. I'm here for about three hours and then back home. So pretty busy. Right now I'm filming a movie called "The Five-Year Engagement" that I wrote with my writing partner, Nick Stoller, which is another romantic comedy under the Judd umbrella. And we've got "Muppets" coming out.

them to do their thing.

With the first official trailer for "The Muppets" out now, you must be pretty stoked.

I couldn't be more excited. That's been a real labor of love. Nick Stoller and I started writing it almost five years ago. I've seen cuts of it, and we're just inches away from some real magic.

You've been doing some great parody trailers for it.

I thought the very first parody trailer, where it seemed like a mediocre romantic comedy, was really funny, too. I was watching people kind of sigh in relief that Amy Adams and I hadn't made a terrible movie.

No really, it's exactly what meets the eye

'Transformers: Dark of the Moon' corrects past mistakes and takes the audience on an epic, wild ride

"Transformers: Dark of the Moon" is in theaters today.

The lesson of the success of "X-Men: First Class" and "Transformers: Dark of the Moon" might be that in order to get an audience interested, you can't be afraid to rewrite history.

As "X-Men" revamped the Cuban Missile Crisis to suit its needs, "Transformers" put a new spin on the space race of the 1960s, proposing that it was the crash of an Autobot spaceship on the moon that inspired the U.S. to develop its NASA program.

From there we meet up with Sam Witwicky in modern times (Shia LaBeouf), who after getting an Ivy League education, has moved in with his new girlfriend Carly (Rosie Huntington-Whiteley). Megan Fox's character is quickly dismissed in one line of dialogue.

Witwicky's new goal is to land a job, which he does, working for a strange incarnation of John Malkovich as Bruce Brazos, the brassy executive for a government contractor. Witwicky gets drawn back into the war between the Autobots and the Decepticons by way of the new company and a nutty scientist played by always-hilarious Ken Jeong.

What follows is a pretty tight sequence of events with the exception of the battles, which can be tediously long.

But Michael Bay has heard your pleas, "Transformers" fans. When the robots clash, it's much easier to understand the physics of what's happening, even if at times, they all look like the innards of a garbage disposal making out with a can opener.

While the plot doesn't require much heavy lifting (and would you really expect it to?), the comic moments always come off as they're intended to. Huntington-Whitely doesn't bring much to the table, but then again, the female in distress hardly has to.

Overall, this third edition makes for an improvement on the last's failures. You know what you're going to get, and that's never been a bad thing for most movie-goers.

Our Aim is to Beat Most Offers!

We Strive to Beat All Legitimate Written Offers

Before Bringing your items to us, take them to other dealers. Have them give you legitimate offers in writing. Then bring your jewelry and written offers to one of our locations. Although no one can guarantee with certainty they are paying the highest price for an article at any particular time, we will strive to beat most legitimate written offers.

Why We Can Usually Pay More Than Other Dealers

Most jewelers and dealers specialize in few items and focus on newer looking items to resell. Because they are unfamiliar with many other items including vintage jewelry, old watches, coins, flatware, etc. they tend to offer very low prices because these items are not readily saleable for them. Our company has many specialized buyers for the various classifications of items that we purchase, therefore we can usually pay more.

A Note Regarding the Up To Prices listed in this Ad

The condition and rarity of an item determines its price. If an item is in excellent condition and very rare it might be worth the up to price, or even more. However, if an item is in poor condition, the value will be lower. For example, a 1927 S Quarter could be worth $7,000 in new condition or less than $20 in poor condition. The up to price reflects items of exceptional quality and rarity. Although it is unlikely you will have these items due to their extreme rarity, feel free to bring whatever items you may have and we will evaluate them free of charge.

Customer Satisfaction

Most of our business comes from satisfied customers and referrals which includes their friends and families. Our showrooms are safe and private. Our staff is courteous and professional and we strive as a company to make your selling experience a pleasant one.

Protecting your skin

You don't have to be at the beach to get sun damage • What to know before purchasing your next tube of sunscreen • Some great new options

Now that the sun is shinning, we plan to spend as much time as possible outdoors. Dr. Kenneth Mark, a skin cancer surgeon and clinical assistant professor of dermatology at New York University, breaks down the new FDA regulations on sunscreen and tells us what we need to know to frolic under the sun stress-free.

The new FDA regulations state sunscreens should protect against both ultraviolet A (UVA) and ultraviolet B (UVB) rays. Why?

Until recently, most chemicals in sunscreen did not protect against UVA rays (unless it contained a physical blocker such as zinc oxide and titanium dioxide, which protects against both UVA and UVB rays) and SPF only refers to UVB protection. UVB rays cause sunburn; however, UVA rays penetrate the skin deeper and cause more skin cancer and aging from the sun.

COMSTOCK

▶ Lather up!

What happens to skin if you don't use sunscreen?

When you don't use sunscreen, you can get blotchy pigment (brown sun spots). The skin also thins, so blood vessels show through and cause redness. Besides that, collagen breaks down and you get wrinkles, and of course pre-cancerous rough spots and ultimately skin cancers — all bad stuff!

How often should you apply?

When in the sun directly (at the beach, outside) apply sunscreen at least every two hours. If you are sweating or swimming, reapply every 30 minutes after significant water exposure. When you are in and out of the sun, apply your sunscreen two or three times throughout the day.

Helping to shed the stigma of anxiety

- It's more common than you think
- 'Any anxiety should be addressed and treated,' expert says
- If you're struggling, don't be afraid to ask for help

Sweating, shaking, palpitations, shortness of breath and even vomiting are common symptoms of an anxiety disorder. Yet, Manhattan-based psychologist and therapist Dr. Jeff Gardere says that anxiety itself isn't the problem.

"Anxiety is a natural part of life," Dr. Gardere tells Metro. "The problem is when we are unable to pinpoint the causes and deal with that. When anxiety becomes so constant it starts to affect us physically, then we see real problems in our lives." Those problems can include fatigue, high blood pressure, difficulty in concentrating, irritability or sleep and appetite disturbances.

"People often hide their anxiety and don't deal with it until it becomes chronic. Any anxiety should be addressed and treated," he adds. "There are antianxiety medications and cognitive restructuring therapy. Cognitive behavior therapy helps people move past the mental attitude [that causes the anxiety] and flips the script to something that empowers you."

"Anxiety is a natural part of life. The problem is when we are unable to pinpoint the causes and deal with that.

Some deep-rooted problems might not be immediately apparent, which is when long-term therapy is useful "to work through the underlying issues," says Gardere.

"Anything that promotes relaxation, such as deep breathing techniques and mental imagery, [is helpful]," he adds.

The first thing that people suffering with anxiety should realize is that they are not alone — it's something most people experience at some time in their life. For instance, Gardere recently went back to school and one class was so difficult for him that on several occasions he vomited beforehand. "If it happened to me, a shrink who treats people for this," he laughs, "it can happen to anyone."

Living with anxiety

One reader shares her story: "I have a great job, wonderful friends, an amazing boyfriend — and an anxiety disorder. Over recent years, my worrying became out of control, and I definitely experienced the physical symptoms you read about (stomach pains, inability to focus, insomnia). About a year ago, I started taking an antidepressant; and although it's not a cure-all, it has helped me tremendously. I no longer think obsessively like I used to, and my physical pains have disappeared. Now, I couple my medication with weekly therapy sessions and am really getting to the root of what has caused my anxiety. Don't be ashamed of asking for help."

Pros, cons of gay marriage

Here's the reality of the vote that took place in New York state over marriage that most people in the more liberal side of the press have not talked about: Of 50 states, there are 41 that have laws on the books outlawing same-sex marriage. The vote in New York is hardly a victory for that minority; it actually shows just how bizarre their position is. No law by any government will change our faith, no matter how much money is thrown at it or who votes what.
JOHN HEMPHILL, VIA E-MAIL

So New York's Gov. Cuomo has signed into law the legalization of gay marriage. I agree with that, but call it a civil union, partnership, cohabitation, etc. — anything but "marriage." It's blasphemous, a gross distortion, sacrilegious and an affront to all who were brought up with the basic understanding that traditional marriage is a union between a man and a woman. And that is that!
HERB STARK, VIA E-MAIL

State Sen. Ruben Diaz thinks doomsday is upon us all due to gays allowed legally to marry? He should consider that doomsday more easily will be brought by nuclear weapons in Iran or Japan nuclear plants, or the rains in South Dakota or every imaginable natural or man-made disaster — virtually anything except two people who want to get married. The pursuit of happiness is a right, and all men and women are equal.
ANA MARTINEZ, VIA E-MAIL

What's wrong with a career?

RE: "POLITICS SHOULD NOT BE A CAREER": I read yet another letter disparaging "career politicians." The letter failed to address, however, the way in which "amateur politicians," who have yet to learn their way around, can easily be manipulated and bought by corporate-funded lobbyists. In every other phase of our lives, we accept careerism as a virtue (law, medicine, carpentry, auto repair, etc). Why is careerism suddenly an evil thing when it comes to the politicians whom we elect to govern us? JON MELICK, VIA E-MAIL

And she wants to lead us ...

So Michelle Bachman wants to eliminate the minimum wage? We need to get these kind of people out of our political system. They are dangerous to all of us!
BARBARA TARVYDAS, VIA E-MAIL

No return time yet for bearded Woods

- Unsure when he'll be back on the Tour
- Spending his days rehabbing
- Says he won't play in July's British Open unless he has a chance to win

RIKARD LARMA/METRO

▶ Woods seemed in a good mood when he addressed the press at Aronimink Golf Club yesterday.

Tiger Woods walked into Aronimink Golf Club in Newtown Square yesterday sporting a full-on beard and mustache. Either he forgot to shave, or he was sending a message: Even hurt, he's still the man on the PGA Tour.

Woods was at the course for the first day of the AT&T National, which benefits his foundation. Even before reporters had a chance to ask about his balky knee and ankle, the golfer opened by laughing and saying, "I'm feeling good; just had lunch."

No one asked what he ate. All the questions were about one thing: When is Woods returning?

"There's no timetable," Woods said. "That's hard for me. I've always been very goal-oriented about when I'm going to play, how I'm going to peak, how I'm going to get ready, how my practice schedule is going to be. And I'm not doing that this time."

Woods said he came back too soon at The Players, and wouldn't make that mistake again. While he admitted to some leisurely putting, Woods hasn't teed it up and hit it for real. Instead, he's been rehabbing in the gym and watching cartoons with his kids. (For the record, he's sick of the "Dora the Explorer" theme song.)

If there was a goal, which Woods repeatedly said there is not, it would be the British Open in two weeks. But he won't enter unless he's 100 percent.

"I won't go over there to just show up," Woods said.

Beard reaction

The Twitterverse certainly noticed Woods' new look yesterday.

- @TM_Damo
  Just seen Tiger Woods with a beard on Sky Sports News. His look now matches his reputation! #dirtyboy
- @JasonSobelGC
  Wheels churning in Ponte Vedra Beach headquarters already. Tiger Woods' facial hair? It's a playoff beard! FedExCup right around the corner!

A reason for the change?

While it's not up to the level of Walt Frazier's mutton chops, there might be a grand purpose behind Tiger Woods' new look, according to one commentator.

"There's a theory out there that suggests that men who usually don't wear beards grow them when they want to reflect an inner change on the outside," Nicholas Carlson wrote on the Business Insider website. "Maybe the beard means Tiger has come to terms with himself and is ready to give young Rory McIlroy a run for his money."

Woods: 'Cool' to see Rory dominate

Tiger Woods watched Rory McIlroy dismantle the field at the U.S. Open in the same way we all did.

In awe.

Woods said yesterday that it was "cool" to see the 22-year-old stay aggressive, even with such a massive lead in the tournament.

"That was seriously good playing," Woods said. "That's what's fun, when you have a lead and keep building it."

Then Woods took it a step further, saying he agreed with Mark O'Meara. Woods' longtime friend commented that McIlory has a better swing than Woods did at the same age.

"I felt like at the same age, yeah, his swing is definitely better than mine was," Woods said.

Good day, bad day

Good day
The U.S. women's national soccer team opened the World Cup on the right foot, beating North Korea, 2-0.

It took the Americans 54 minutes to break through, when Lauren Cheney beat DPRK keeper Hong Myong Hui.

Bad day
Talk about a buzzkill. Just weeks after winning the Stanley Cup, Bruins captain Zdeno Chara will meet with Montreal police over his March 8 hit on Habs F Max Pacioretty.

Authorities are deciding whether to press charges against the B's D-man.

Flyers usher in new era, hand out Carter's jersey

Simmonds accepts No. 17 in introductory press conference ◗ Schenn gets Versteeg's digits ◗ Both players hope to make impact on new team

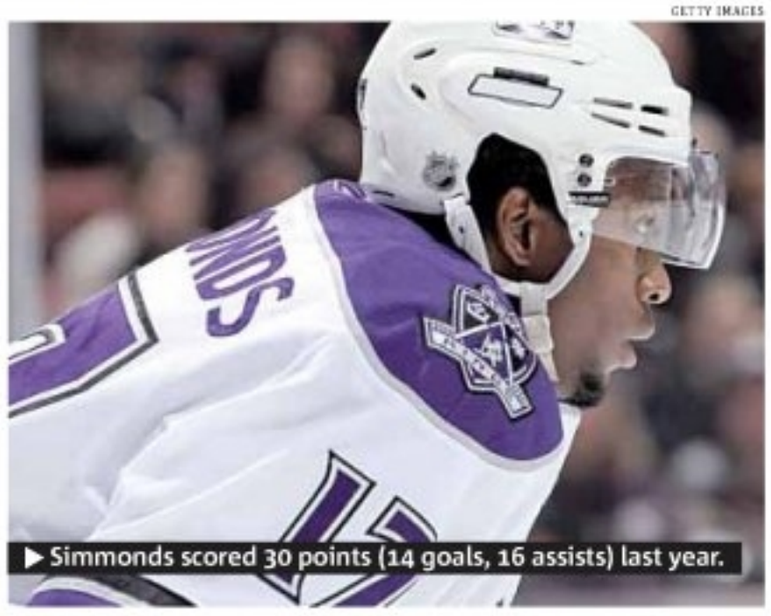
Not only is Jeff Carter gone, but so is his jersey.

Newcomer Wayne Simmonds slipped on Carter's old No. 17 following yesterday's introductory press conference, which also included highly regarded center Brayden Schenn and winger Jakub Voracek.

Schenn posed for the cameras wearing No. 10, which probably doesn't bode well for Kris Versteeg. Voracek, who posted 14 goals and 32 assists last year for Columbus, played it safe with No. 9, which was last worn by David Laliberte back in 2009.

Mike Richards' No. 18 wisely remains vacant, which is one way of saying none of these guys will attempt to fill the departed captain's skates.

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Simmonds scored 30 points (14 goals, 16 assists) last year.

"I don't feel there's any added pressure," said Simmonds, described by GM Paul Holmgren as a "rough and tumble" right wing.

"I'm just gonna come in and play my game. Go up and down the wall and take pucks to the net. That's what I'm good at, and that's what I'm gonna stick to."

And 19-year-old Schenn, despite rave reviews across the board, just wants to make the team out of training camp, and then see where that leads.

"I feel ready," said Schenn, who played in eight games for the Kings last year. "All the experience I've had helps. I'll just try to make the most of it."

Regardless of the numbers on their backs, don't expect any of them to try to replace Jeff Carter and Mike Richards.

Two passionate teams, two passionate fan bases

Phillies, Red Sox fans travel to support clubs ◗ Both get cheered and booed at opposing stadiums ◗ Former Philly skipper blocks out noise

It doesn't seem that long ago that fans sporting Boston Red Sox jerseys rivaled Phillies followers at Citizens Bank Park.

Nowadays, tickets at the Bank are almost as difficult to score as ducats at Fenway Park. Both yards are always sold out. Still, the Sox were represented by a healthy number of fans last night at the standing-room-only park in South Philly. It's the same when the Phillies play in Boston.

"When we're there, we get good support from our fans," Shane Victorino said. "You see them and you hear them, and that's great. Our fans travel [well] and so do the Red Sox fans. All of that makes the games more fun."

Red Sox slugger David Ortiz agreed.

"The mix of the fans makes it that much more interesting," Ortiz said. "It adds a lot of energy to the ballpark. That electricity is a good thing. I'm used to it. You hear some funny things sometimes."

Like when Phillies fans started an "E-A-G-L-E-S" chant at Fenway months after the Patriots beat the Eagles in the Super Bowl.

Sox manager Terry Francona, who was also the Phillies skipper in the late '90s, blocks out all of the noise and visuals.

"I never hear any of it," Francona said. "I know each fan base well and the fans in Boston and Philadelphia are both very passionate. But I block all of that out once I get to the park. We all have a job to do and our job is on the field. It has nothing to do with what's going on in the stands."

Graduate Hospital: A neighborhood guide

The area may not have the most stable name But it does have plenty to offer to young professionals looking to live near Center City

Neighborhood guide

Graduate Hospital has a naming problem. The neighborhood, which runs from South St. to Washington Ave. and from Broad St. to the Schuylkill, flips between Graduate or Grad Hospital, South of South, Southwest Center City and occasionally, in Realtor-speak "steps from Rittenhouse Square" (that's a lot of steps).

"The hospital is gone, so people think the name should change. But ask six different people what the name is, and you get seven different answers," says Andrew Dalzell, program coordinator for the South of South Neighborhood Association and a neighborhood resident.

▶ Julian Abele Park has a new Mural Arts Program work.

No wonder the name is in flux: The area has been rapidly changing, with median home sale prices up 385 percent from 10 years ago, from around $70,000 to $270,000, according to Trulia.com. Over the past year, the median has dipped 17 percent; but still, says Dalzell, "if Center City is where people pay Center City prices, then this is definitely becoming part of Center City."

Looking at last year's census, the area gained residents for the first time since the 1800s, he adds.

Most of those new residents are younger professionals, many with young kids, moving into single-family townhouses or larger properties recently converted into condos. There's also enough new construction to draw people who can't find anything that's both new and affordable closer to Rittenhouse.

"You get more bang for your buck than, say, north of South St.," says Peter Bishop, owner of Independent Custom Realty. He's seeing existing two-bedroom townhouses going for around $250,000, while roomier, new construction homes are in the $375,000 to $420,000 range.

The easy walkability to Center City is a big selling point, Bishop says. From his office on 16th and Lombard, he sees a "stampede" of people every morning heading north to get to work.

▶ Elton John's living room, as designed by Lawrence-Bullard.

▶ Let your decor speak volumes
The stylist suggests laying out three or four coffee-table books, or stacking 10-12 next to a chair for a hip take on a side table. "Don't be afraid to decorate with your books," he says. "It lets people know your interests."

▶ Create a standout sofa
Lawrence-Bullard recommends switching up your couch's accessories as the seasons change, opting for cheery, fun pillows in the summer and chic velvet ones come winter. And don't forget a simple blanket: "In the summer have a bright pink throw, and in the winter buy a beautiful, olive-green cashmere throw," he says.

▶ Add your own personal luxury
Lawrence-Bullard recommends keeping fragrance candles — in scents like fig or orange blossom — on hand for some instant ambiance. "Decorating isn't just about the visual — it's about all of the senses," he says.

▶ Make your pad look ginormous
"Mirrors bring light and space into an apartment, and the bigger size you can get, the better," the designer says. "Another trick is [to] get foil wallpaper and wallpaper the ceiling. That silver shimmer foil on ceiling reflects light and makes everything feel bigger. It's an amazing trick."

▶ Jazz up your floor
"If you're in an apartment and it's got some horrible oatmeal carpet, it's so easy to layer an inexpensive flat weave rug over the top of it just to give some impact," Lawrence-Bullard says.

Spruce up that white-tiled bathroom
"If you're in an apartment or a rental where you don't like bathroom, you can really put your own flavor into that space by the towels," the designer says. And if your shower doesn't come equipped with a sleek glass door, don't fret: An eye-popping shower curtain can exude good taste. "Put [a] beautiful tropical, leaf-printed shower curtain, [add] emerald-green towels with a couple of white crisp towels folded over the top, [and] you've suddenly created this fabulous tropical feeling in what was once a very plain bathroom."
